3) Participating in institutional activities as 'anchor', 'discussant' or 'rapporteur'

At T.N. Rao College of Teacher Education, a noteworthy practice has been implemented to enhance the confidence and communication skills of students. All students are given the opportunity to engage in anchoring activities, ensuring that every student, without exception, actively participates.

This approach allows students to showcase their communication abilities and plays a crucial role in fostering their confidence. Through this inclusive practice, students are encouraged to step into the spotlight, express themselves, and refine their public speaking skills. This hands-on experience is invaluable in preparing them for future roles that require effective communication, such as teaching or other professional endeavors.

By providing a 100% participation opportunity, T.N. Rao College of Teacher Education is not only nurturing the communicative competence of its students but also instilling a sense of self-assurance that will serve them well in various aspects of their academic and professional journeys.

4) Classroom teaching learning situations along with teacher and peer feedback

It is important to prepare the teachers for practicum and one of the preparations is peer teaching and feedback. Peer feedback provides an opportunity for trainees to practice the actual teaching and learn from their peers prepares teachers for teaching practicum. Peer feedback can be considered an essential component of the peer teaching process. Peer feedback and assessment are of great importance for pre-service teachers because this might develop critical thinking, problem-solving and self-regulating skills.
